Constitution Day
&
Ferguson Revisited Event

In response to the killing of Amadou Diallo by four NYPD officers in 1999, Bruce Springsteen wrote “American Skin (41 Shots) where he imagined this conversation:

"Lena gets her son ready for school
She says, "On these streets, Charles
You've got to understand the rules
If an officer stops you, promise me you'll always be polite
And that you'll never ever run away
Promise Mama you'll keep your hands in sight"

Does that sound familiar? If you are a mother, did you have this talk with your son (or daughter)? If you don't have children of your own when did you get it from your parents?

September 26, 2014
5pm
Social Hall
Trinity Washington University
Sponsored by the School of Professional Studies